Join Indiana educators committed to improving teaching and learning at the Indiana School Transformation Conference, sponsored by Ball State University Teachers College's Department of Educational Leadership.

A Harvard University professor and founder of The Leadership and Learning Center, Douglas Reeves will present the interactive three-hour keynote session addressing the latest in successful research, design, and implementation practices for transitioning underperforming and average-performing schools to high-achieving schools.

Reeves has worked with education, business, nonprofit, and government organizations throughout the world. The author of more than 20 books and many articles on leadership and organizational effectiveness, he has twice been named to the Harvard University Distinguished Authors Series. His monthly column on change leadership appears in Educational Leadership. He was named the Brock International Laureate for his contributions to education and has received the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Secondary School Principals as well as the Parents Choice Award for his writing for children and parents.

Afternoon sessions will be presented by Indiana education leaders who have accomplished successful school transformations. They will share data, strategies, and actions that resulted in improved school and student achievement.

There is no cost to register for the conference; however, lunch is $15.
